Meet Tomorrow And Tuesday at Mountain Retreat

By JAMES E. ROPER
 Star Staff Correspondent

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Nov. 19.—President Eisenhower will meet with the National Security Council and his Cabinet next week at Camp David, the presidential retreat. Many of the Government's top officials will fly there from Washington in helicopters.

Mr. Eisenhower called the Security Council to meet at 2:30 p.m. Monday and the Cabinet to meet at 9 a.m. Tuesday.

Mr. Eisenhower and a number of other officials who will attend both meetings will spend Monday night at Camp David, in the Catoctin Mountains, 65 miles from Washington.

The meetings will mark the first sessions of the Security Council and Cabinet which Mr. Eisenhower has attended since he left Washington last August for a Colorado vacation and—unknowingly—his September 24 heart attack.

Will Use 4 Helicopters

White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty, in announcing plans for the meetings of the Security Council and Cabinet, disclosed that four helicopters will be used to shuttle the mass of Government officials between Washington and Camp David.

One will pick up Vice President Nixon at the Military Air Transport terminal, where he will have arrived from Florida. Three other helicopters will operate from a landing pad near the Pentagon.

Starting at about 1:30 p.m. Monday, the helicopters will start airlifting officials from near the Pentagon and depositing them on a similar landing site about 200 yards from Laurel Lodge, where the meetings will be held.

The helicopters also will operate early Tuesday morning, flying up officials who are not attending the Security Council meeting but will be needed for the Cabinet session.

Security Factor Cited

Mr. Hagerty, asked why the meetings were being held at Camp David, said there was not sufficient space on Mr. Eisenhower's farm.

"Particularly in the case of the National Security Council," he said, "the meeting had to be held in a secure place. Camp David is a military reservation under the jurisdiction of the United States Navy. It has Marine guards."

The list of persons attending the large meeting of the Security Council suggested that the session would appraise the global outlook in view of the failure of the Big Four foreign ministers meeting in Geneva.

Eight-Passenger Craft

The three helicopters that will operate from the Pentagon landing pad will be Piasecki H-21 "Flying Bananas." The eight-passenger craft, starting at 1:30 p.m., will take off with Secretary of State Dulles, Secretary of Defense Wilson, Defense Mobilization Director Arthur S. Flemming, Undersecretary of State Herbert Hoover, Jr., Director Theodore C. Streibert of the United States Information Agency, Director John Hollister of International Cooperation Administration and Gen. Nathan Twining, who will represent the joint chiefs of staff.

Director Allen Dulles of the Central Intelligence Agency will fly to Gettysburg Monday morning in a small, conventional plane, drive to the Eisenhower farm and ride with the President to Camp David. Mr. Hagerty explained that Mr. Dulles had something to take up with the President and would discuss it on the 20-mile ride to Camp David.

Tuesday morning, the helicopter airlift will resume, with one of the "Flying Bananas" carrying Agriculture Secretary Benson, Interior Secretary McKay and Labor Secretary Mitchell from the Pentagon to Camp David, which is near Thurmont, Md.

Arriving last night for the week end were William E. Robinson, president of the Coca-Cola Corp.; W. Alton Jones, chairman of the board of Cities Service Corp. and Mrs. Jones. Already on hand was Gen. Alfred Gruenther, commander of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization force.

Last night, Mr. Eisenhower played his first bridge since his heart attack. Among those at the table were Gen. Gruenther and Dr. Howard M. Snyder, the President's personal physician.

Dr. Snyder reported today, however, that Mr. Eisenhower went to bed early enough to get more than eight hours of sleep. More bridge was on the presidential schedule tonight.

Mr. Hagerty said that as far as he knew the President had not mentioned that today is the Lincoln's delivery of his Gettysburg address.

Officials listed to attend the Security Council meeting were: Mr. Eisenhower; Mr. Nixon; Mr. Dulles; Mr. Wilson; Mr. Flemming; Treasury secretary Humphrey; Attorney General Brownell; Budget Director Rowland Hughes; Chairman Lewis L. Strauss of the Atomic Energy Commission; Mr. Streibert; the President's special assistant on disarmament, Harold E. Stassen; Mr. Hoover; Gen. Twining; Allen Dulles; chairman Robert Bowie of the State Department's policy planning board; special assistant on psychological operations, the President's special assistant on security council affairs, Dillon Anderson; the President's "Chief of staff," Sherman Adams.
